

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE 18

U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT
9 June 1980

Washington Whispers

U.S. intelligence officials are convinced that the Soviet Union will not send any more troops into Afghanistan for at least two months—to avoid an international furor that might spur more nations into pulling out of the Moscow Olympics, due to end in early August.

★ ★ ★

Many top Pentagon officials are convinced that if Carter is re-elected, one of his first moves will be to fire Director Stansfield Turner of the Central Intelligence Agency. Cited as the chief reason: Turner, a retired Navy admiral, has been unable to get along with either intelligence experts or military leaders.